Game Types

There are five types of games you can play in Arcade:

Bounty

Climb every mountain with Bounties, a personal challenge where you compete against yourself. Watch yourself soar up the mountain as you reach your goal. Can you get there before time expires?

Best Use: Bounties are great in order to individually challenge team members to accomplish a desired task. Set a bounty with a deadline and watch your team be incentivized to soar to the top of the mountains?

Race

The heat is on! Races will have you speeding around the racetrack as you attempt to overtake the competition and claim 1st place. Compete against your coworkers to claim the top spot.

Best Use: In this classic game where you compete against your team members, incentivize a last minute rush to the finish by implementing a race!

Tournament

The players who finish 1st, 2nd, and 3rd in the tournament will win prizes. Tournaments are great for encouraging progress towards longer-term goals.

Best Use: Tournaments are great for encouraging progress towards longer-term goals.

One Time

Win a prize for a one-time action! Complete a less frequent goal by incentivizing a team by using a one time game. Each player or team competes for themselves — when you achieve the goal that is set, you get the prize you choose.

Best Use: Great for getting a task done, setting a tiered goal, or finally getting the back-office clean.

Every Time

This game has a prize for every action accomplished that is set. You will receive a prize every time you hit your goal.

Best Use: This is a great game for repeating goals, consistent incentives, or making work challenging each day.
