

What's New in CARES 14.5?

Since the onset of the Covid-19 pandemic, a growing number of organizations have relied on CenturionCARES' unique expertise to establish remote customer service operations quickly and securely, utilizing the CARES Contact Center Platform and its Remote Agent Workforce capabilities. Understanding the move from office to home brings various and unforeseen challenges to call center management, CARES 14.5 includes new tools and functionality to alleviate those concerns.

Enhancements for Customers and Staff

Along with the improvements allowing contact center managers to better perform their duties, customer facing enhancements have also been made to the CARES platform. Email-in-queue has been improved in 14.5, boosting productivity by allowing agents to handle email requests without having to launch a separate email client such as Microsoft Outlook. CARES latest release also includes an improved WebChat function, allowing callers to communicate with an agent in real-time through a browser-based chat window.

Bits and Bytes

Call center administrators have been given the functionality to change multiple skill assignments for multiple agents quickly and efficiently. They may assign multiple skills to an agent, assign multiple agents to a skill, and customize a list of preferred skills that can be saved and easily recalled.
